

Basic Detail Report

Dagger

Date

19th to 20th Century

Medium

Wood, obsidian, fiber, resin, trade bead and stingray spine

Description

Obsidian tipped spear head with the tip of the spear broken off. Obsidian is naturally occurring in the Admiralty Islands, particularly on Lou and Manus Islands. It is mined and traded throughout the region. Obsidian was commonly used as a cutting tool and weapon. This spear features an obsidian blade hafted into a decorated base. The quality of such spears diminished around the start of the 20th Century due to the introduction of Western weapons and materials and the development of a Western tourist market that was particularly focused around weapons.
