19th Century

Medium

Sperm whale ivory and metal

Description

The rightmost pick in the set of three picks from the 19th century is made of sperm whale ivory and are each in the shape of an arm with thumb and forefinger on hand pinched together. Each hand holds a black stick. This rightmost pick has a handle carved with a diamond pattern. 19th Century New England whalers used whale teeth and bones to create art. Scrimshaw was shaped into every form imaginable to the mind of sailors, but carvings on the high seas often relied on source materials available on ships
